THE KING'S LEADERSHIP & PEOPLE MANAGEMENT PROGRAMME (IN-PERSON)

Enhance your leadership skills and position yourself for immediate and future success.

Executives in their mid-careers face ever-increasing challenges. There are new opportunities and greater rewards, but allied to those are increasing demands & problems with team members and colleagues at all levels of the organisation.

Our Leadership & People Management programme is designed to help: we equip executives to understand and tackle leadership challenges in ways that will be relevant throughout their working lives.

Unlock your leadership potential

Taking place over four days at King's Business School, the course includes an individual work-related project and coaching for participants where you will explore your own leadership challenges. We then bring the group back together for a final Capstone day (which can be completed in person or virtually dependent on your location) to reflect on your progress and build the foundations for your next step.

Course essentials

Our Leadership & People Management programme is an intensive short course offering ideas, latest thinking, and lessons from practice. It equips participants to lead individuals, teams and organisations through uncertain times.

Drawing on leading research, the course content is built on two fundamental pillars:

- Theory & evidence - Together we will explore contemporary perspectives on leadership, understand organisations as political entities and how leadership operates in that context, and the role of emotions in leadership (including developing and utilising emotional intelligence effectively).
- Experiences of leadership - You will participate in an in-depth simulation of an organisational system in which you will experiment, step back, observe and notice. You will work and lead across organisational boundaries and research and reflect upon the impact of leadership on others.
